Continually losing home network signal

2019/07/20

As the title suggests, I'm continually losing the signal from my home network. I get full signal from the neighbor wifi, but my own home wifi will have full signal, suddenly drop all signal and disconnect, then my computer will keep trying and failing to reconnect until I disable and enable my adapter. I do have a cheap little Tenda AC1300 I picked up from Micro Center. Had to actually download drivers for a Realtek 8812AU, I believe, because the drivers provided by Tenda are ancient and unreliable. But it's less than 3 months old. My PC is both virus and Malware free. I run scheduled nightly scans with both Avast and Malwarebytes premium. I have checked and verified that my computer is not set to "shut the device off to save power". My wifi power settings are set to maximum performance. I have Windows 10 with the latest updates. Running a Crosshair VI Hero, with 16GB Corsair Vengeance at 3200MHz, a Ryzen 7 1700 at 3.5GHz, Corsair 860i PSU (Oldest part in my PC) and a ASUS ROG Strix GeForce GTX 1080. Anyone got some advice? I'm stumped. All I'm succeeding in doing, is getting a headache.
